

... the resort is grateful that the manager. Oregon winter was a success.

Photos courtesy of Larry Turner

Winding down: A skier carves a snowy trail on the slopes at Mammoth Mountain. Because of light snow this year, the ski-snowboard season is winding down.

Mammoth Mountain offers breathtaking experiences

By LEE JUILLERAT: H&N Regional Editor

MAMMOTH, Calif. — Two runs. Too much fun.

The first run from the top of Mammoth Mountain's Chair 23 had me laughing out loud, sounds no one heard because they were whisked away by wildly whipping winds.

From the top of the chair, our end it showed our outing had been a real blast in more ways than one: We had skied more than 26,000 vertical feet, hit a top speed of 43 mph and dropped down a 38 degree slope.

A day later we returned up Chair 23. The winds were calm, the views incredible — a visual smorgasbord of

